First Baptist Church Winston-Salem, North Carolina

When a church decides to bring a building that was built in the 1920's into the 21st century, that church is faced with many decisions. First Baptist Church of Winston-Salem, North Carolina, recently faced those decisions and is now worshipping in a facility that has the charm of the period architecture and 21st century technical equipment.

When OneSource was contracted to perform the technical system updates, we found that not only could we provide systems to meet the sound, lighting, and video needs of this congregation but that we could offer suggestions that would enhance the outcome of the renovation.

The technical challenge was to provide these systems in a way that would not detract from the existing design of the facility yet still provide the modern equipment expected in today's worship environment.

OneSource resolved many issues from assisting the church in finding a vendor to provide a complete rebuild of the massive chandelier in the center of the room, to installation of a screen that can be raised when needed for video presentations or lowered into an architectural feature that completely hides the screen.

In order for the renovation of this worship center to commence, First Baptist needed to provide a facility for worship during the time of the construction process. OneSource was contracted to update the technical systems in the Kelly Auditorium located in the basement below the worship center. Upon completion of the Kelly Auditorium upgrades, First Baptist began work on the worship center renovation.
